CHELSEA.

C. O. Slack & Son Have Sold Business to O. Fay Allen.

C. O. Slack & Son have sold their grocery business to O. Fay Allen, and Mr. Allen has taken possession. Mr. Slack and son have conducted a nice business during the past two years, having succeeded Geo. A. Tracy. Mr. Allen needs no words of introduction or recommendation to the people of Chelsea and vicinity. His apprenticeship with J. A. R. Corwin & Son and his experience in trade in Vershire ought to thoroughly prepare him for the business in his new field of labor, and we predict for him a liberal patronage. Julian Slack, the junior member of the retiring firm, will assist Mr. Allen for a time.

Mr. Dickenson held a responsible position with one of the copper mining companies at the time they shut down last fall and expects to resume the work of his former position when the mines open again, which it is expected will be in the near future.

The Undergrad.

O simple and crude were the notions I had

When I was a callow and green undergrad!

And simplest of all were the thoughts that were mine

On how to excel in the pedagogic line.

I fancied—like many Oxonian geese—

One should study the culture of Rome and of Greece.

I dreamt of the grove where Calliope sings,

And my heart it would pant for Pierian springs.

And when I had gathered such lore as I could,

And flung o'er my shoulders a bachelor's hood,

I thought, in my folly, I'd nothing to do

But set up as Master and teach what I knew.

Rude, rude was my waking! I soon was to find

My notions were ages and ages behind;

The hours I had spent in achieving a taste

For classical culture were nothing but waste.

What was Oedipus Rex? What was Pericles' speech?

I should have been studying how one should teach.

For What you impart doesn't much matter now;

The only significant thing is the How.

I should have been busy researching. I ought

To have measured the length of an infantile thought.

To have marked the effect on the car-dia's action

Induced by an effort in simple subtraction.

I should have been weighing the toddlers before

And after a lesson in nursery lore.

And known what they lost, to a scrupulous grammar.

In learning the story of Mary's pet lamb.

I ought to have studied with close application

The full psychologic effect of dictation

And the chemico-physical change that ensues

When an infant is learning that four is two twos.

Ah me! Can I wonder if men who have wrung

From Science the secrets of teaching the young

Arrive at the seats of the mighty, while

A mere scholar at best, am a thing to pass by?

—Punch.
